

Edgar follows the bus. "I must get my bag back!" he thinks. He rides faster and faster and he is not riding carefully. He is not looking at the people in the park. He is only looking at the bus. Then he nearly hits a dog. A man shouts, "Hey! My dogs! Look where you're going!" "Sorry!" shouts Edgar. But he is only thinking about the bag. "Faster, faster!" he thinks.

Edgar does not see a woman with her ice cream. He hits the woman and she drops her ice cream. "Ouch!" she says. "Hey! My ice cream!" She is angry with Edgar. "Stop! Come back!" she shouts. But Edgar does not stop. He rides away quickly. He does not say he is sorry.
