

Now it is Friday afternoon. Billy and Rox are outside a new hospital in London. Billy is carrying lots of red roses. At 2.30 he is going to give them to the Queen. At that moment, Rox is going to take a photo. Just before 2 o'clock the hospital doors open. "What's happening?" says Billy. Someone comes out. It is a tall man with grey hair. "Good afternoon, ladies and gentlemen," he says.

Everyone is quiet. The man looks at his shoes. Then he looks at all the people in front of him. "I'm afraid I've got some bad news," he says. "The Queen has a cold and can't be with us today." "That's it," says Billy. He gives the roses to a woman beside him. "Here," he says, "you can have these." Then he walks down the street. He is very angry. Rox follows him.