THE CIRCUIT

Pre-Reading Activity

Mexico and the United States share a long border and a long history. For more than 150 years, Mexicans have been crossing the border with the hope of finding higher-paying jobs than they could find in their home country. They are known for their hard work and efficiency,¹ as well as for their willingness to work for low pay and under difficult conditions. Most work as manual laborers,² especially on farms. This is very important for American farms that need large numbers of workers during the harvest³ season.

Nevertheless, the United States government has not always welcomed Mexicans into its country. During World War I, Mexican workers filled the jobs of millions of people who had become soldiers and were fighting overseas. When the soldiers returned after the war, they wanted their jobs back and the Mexican workers out of the country. In 1924, the government passed a law forbidding Mexican workers to enter the United States without a visa. From 1929, workers could not get a visa unless they first proved that they had a job waiting for them in the United States. Workers who were already in the country but who didn't have a regular job were sent back to Mexico.

When the United States joined World War II, however, there was once again a great need for Mexican workers. In 1942, the American and Mexican governments signed an agreement creating the Bracero Program. (Bracero is a Spanish word that means “someone who works with his arms” – in other words, a manual laborer.) Under this program, Mexicans were allowed to temporarily⁴ enter the United States to work on farms. Experts believe that approximately 4.5 million braceros came to the U.S. as a result of this program, which ended in 1964. Many of them stayed in the country for years, either sending money back to their families in Mexico or marrying fellow Mexicans and raising families in the United States.

A bracero in a field

The Bracero Program guaranteed⁵ good treatment of Mexican workers, including a minimum salary of thirty cents an hour, as well as proper housing, food, and medical care paid for by employers. Children under the age of fourteen were not allowed to work, and were supposed to be sent to school instead. In many cases, however, employers ignored⁶ some or all of the program requirements. They employed their workers under terrible conditions, but the workers were usually afraid to complain, because they wanted or needed to keep their jobs.

The living conditions of one farm worker's family

Besides the workers who came to the U.S. from Mexico via the program, millions of Mexicans crossed the border illegally during that time. They were treated even more badly than the legal workers, because employers knew that they were illegal and therefore could not complain to anyone about their treatment.

► Although the Bracero Program no longer exists, there are still millions of Mexicans living and working in the United States. In Israel, there are also many foreign workers that work in farming, construction, and care for the elderly. Do you think that that is a positive or a negative trend? Why?

1. efficiency = working well without wasting time
2. manual laborers = people who work with their hands
3. the harvest = a time when fruits, etc., are collected on a farm
4. temporarily = for a short amount of time
5. guaranteed = promised
6. ignored = didn't pay any attention to

Notice While Reading

The Circuit is about a Mexican boy who lives in the United States with his family. As you read Part One of the story, mark sections of the text that mention difficulties that the writer and his family face.

PART ONE

It was that time of year again. Ito, the strawberry sharecropper,¹ did not smile. It was natural. The peak of the strawberry season was over and the last few days the workers, most of them braceros, were not picking as many boxes as they had during the months of June and July.

As the last days of August disappeared, so did the number of braceros. Sunday, only one—the best picker—came to work. I liked him. Sometimes we talked during our half-hour lunch break. That is how I found out he was from Jalisco, the same state in Mexico my family was from. That Sunday was the last time I saw him.

When the sun had faded and sunk² behind the mountains, Ito signaled us that it was time to go home. “Ya esora,”³ he yelled in his broken Spanish. Those were the words I waited for twelve hours a day, every day, seven days a week, week after week, and the thought of not hearing them again saddened me.

As we drove home, Papá did not say a word. With both hands on the wheel, he stared at the dirt road. My older brother, Roberto, was also silent. He leaned his head back and closed his eyes. Once in a while he cleared from his throat the dust that blew in from outside.

Yes, it was that time of year. When I opened the front door to the shack, I stopped. Everything we owned was neatly packed in cardboard boxes.⁴ Suddenly, I felt even more the weight of hours, days, weeks, and months of work. I sat down on a box. The thought of having to move to Fresno and knowing what was in store for me there brought tears to my eyes.

That night I could not sleep. I lay in bed thinking about how much I hated this move.

A little before five o'clock in the morning, Papá woke everyone up. A few minutes later, the yelling and screaming of my little brothers and sisters, for whom the move was a great adventure, broke the silence of dawn.⁵ Shortly, the barking of the dogs accompanied them.

While we packed the breakfast dishes, Papá went outside to start the “Carcanchita.” That was the name Papá gave his old '38 black Plymouth.⁶ He bought it in a used-car lot in Santa Rosa in the winter of 1949. Papá was very proud of his little jalopy. He had a right to be proud of it. He spent a lot of time looking at other cars before buying this one. When he finally chose the “Carcanchita,” he checked it thoroughly before driving it out of the car lot. He examined every inch of the car. He listened to the motor, tilting his head from side to side like a parrot, trying to detect any noises that spelled⁷ car trouble. After being satisfied with the looks and sounds of the car, Papá then insisted on knowing who the original owner was. He never did find out from the car salesman, but he bought the car anyway. Papá figured the original owner must have been an important man because behind the rear seat of the car he found a blue necktie.

1. sharecropper = (a kind of) farmer

2. sunk = gone down

3. Ya esora = It's time

4. cardboard boxes = cartons

5. dawn = early in the morning, when light first appears

6. Plymouth = a type of car

7. spelled = meant

Papá parked the car out in front and left the motor running. “Listo,”¹ he yelled. Without saying a word, Roberto and I began to carry the boxes out to the car. Roberto carried the two big boxes and I carried the two smaller ones. Papá then threw the mattress on top of the car roof and tied it with ropes to the front and rear² bumpers.

35 Everything was packed except Mamá’s pot. It was an old large galvanized³ pot she had picked up at an army surplus store in Santa Maria the year I was born. The pot had many dents and nicks,⁴ and the more dents and nicks it acquired, the more Mamá liked it. “Mi olla,”⁵ she used to say proudly.

I held the front door open as Mamá carefully carried out her pot by both handles, making sure not to spill the cooked beans. When she got to the car, Papá reached out to help her with it. Roberto opened the rear car door and Papá gently placed it on the floor behind the front seat. All of us then climbed in. Papá sighed, wiped the sweat off his forehead with his sleeve, and said wearily, “Es todo.”⁶

As we drove away, I felt a lump in my throat.⁷ I turned around and looked at our little shack for the last time. At sunset we drove into a labor camp near Fresno. Since Papá did not speak English, Mamá asked the camp foreman if he needed any more workers. “We don’t need no more,” said the foreman, scratching his head. 45 “Check with Sullivan down the road. Can’t pass him. He lives in a big white house with a fence around it.”

When we got there, Mamá walked up to the house. She went through a white gate, past a row of rose bushes, up the stairs to the front door. She rang the doorbell, the porch light went on, and a tall husky⁸ man came out. They exchanged a few words. After the man went in, Mamá clasped her hands and hurried back to the car. “We have work! Mr. Sullivan said we can stay there for the whole season,” she said, gasping and pointing 50 to an old garage near the stables.

The garage was worn out⁹ by the years. It had no windows. The walls, eaten by termites, strained to support the roof full of holes. The dirt floor, populated by earthworms,¹⁰ looked like a gray road map.

That night, by the light of a kerosene¹¹ lamp, we unpacked and cleaned our new home. Roberto swept away the loose dirt, leaving the hard ground. Papá plugged¹² the holes in the walls with old newspapers and tin can tops. Mamá fed my little brothers and sisters. Papá and Roberto then brought in the mattress and placed it in the far corner of the garage. “Mamá, you and the little ones sleep on the mattress. Roberto, Panchito, and I will sleep outside under the trees,” Papá said.

Early next morning Mr. Sullivan showed us where his crop¹³ was, and after breakfast, Papá, Roberto, and I headed for the vineyard¹⁴ to pick.¹⁵

60 Around nine o'clock the temperature had risen to almost one hundred degrees.¹ I was completely soaked in sweat and my mouth felt as if I had been chewing on a handkerchief.² I walked over to the end of the row, picked up the jug of water we had brought, and began drinking. "Don't drink too much; you'll get sick," Roberto shouted. No sooner had he said that than I felt sick to my stomach. I dropped to my knees and let the jug roll off my hands. I remained motionless³ with my eyes glued on the hot sandy ground. All I could 65 hear was the drone⁴ of insects.⁵ Slowly I began to recover. I poured water over my face and neck and watched the dirty water run down my arms to the ground.

I still felt a little dizzy when we took a break to eat lunch. It was past two o'clock and we sat underneath a large walnut tree that was on the side of the road. While we ate, Papá jotted⁶ down the number of boxes we had picked. Roberto drew designs on the ground with a stick. Suddenly I noticed Papá's face turn pale as he looked 70 down the road. "Here comes the school bus," he whispered loudly in alarm. Instinctively, Roberto and I ran and hid in the vineyards. We did not want to get into trouble for not going to school. The neatly dressed boys about my age got off. They carried books under their arms. As they crossed the street, the bus drove away. Roberto and I
75 came out from hiding and joined Papá. "Tienen que tener cuidado," he warned us.

After lunch we went back to work. The sun kept beating down. The buzzing insects, the wet sweat, and the hot dry dust made the afternoon seem to last forever. Finally the mountains around the valley reached out and swallowed the sun. Within an hour it was too dark to continue picking. The vines⁸ blanketed the grapes, 80 making it difficult to see the bunches. "Vámonos,"⁹ said Papá, signaling to us that it was time to quit work. Papá then took out a pencil and began to figure out how much we had earned our first day. He wrote down numbers, crossed some out, wrote down some more. "Quince,"¹⁰ he murmured.

When we arrived home, we took a cold shower underneath a waterhose. We then sat down to eat dinner around some wooden crates¹¹ that served as a table. Mama had cooked a special meal for us. We had rice and 85 tortillas with "carne con chile," my favorite dish.

The next morning I could hardly move. My body ached all over. I felt little control over my arms and legs. This feeling went on every morning for days until my muscles finally got used to the work.

1. one hundred degrees = 38° Celsius

2. handkerchief = piece of cloth used as a tissue

3. motionless = not moving

4. drone = buzzing noise

5. insects = small (flying) animals

6. jotted = wrote

7. Tienen que tener cuidado = You have to be careful

8. vines = plants that produce grapes

9. Vámonos = Let's go

10. Quince = Fifteen (dollars)

11. crates = boxes

Basic Understanding

- ___ 29. Everyone except Papá and Roberto slept on the mattress in the corner of the garage.
- ___ 30. In the morning, Panchito yelled excitedly together with his brothers and sisters.
- ___ 31. Papá placed the mattress under the tree for Mamá and the children to sleep on.
- ___ 32. It was dark when Ito signaled that it was time for the workers to stop picking strawberries.

Focusing on Literature

► Narrator

A narrator is the storyteller in a literary text. If the narrator is a character in the story, the story is in first person. If the narrator is not a character in the story, the story is in third person.

1. Who is the narrator in The Circuit? _____
2. What do we know about him / her? _____

► An Additional Focus on Literature

3. What is the setting of the story? _____

4. What is Mr. Sullivan's role in the story? Choose the correct answer.
 To show how (—).
 - a. kind American farmers were to their Mexican workers
 - b. uncaring American farmers were toward their Mexican workers
 - c. easy it was for Mexican workers to get good farming jobs

Analysis and Interpretation I

Answer the questions about Part One of the story.

1. a. True or false? The trip to Fresno took only a few hours. (lines 19–45) _____
 b. Copy the sentences / phrases that prove your answer.

2. Mr. Sullivan allowed Panchito's family to stay in his old garage, which wasn't really fit for anyone to live in. How do you think he rationalized this? (lines 46–57) _____

3. Why did Papá tell Roberto and Panchito to be careful? (lines 67–76) _____

Analysis and Interpretation II

Read one or more of the following questions with your teacher and answer it / them as directed by your teacher.

► Inferring

Before beginning these questions, turn to page 211 for an introduction to the HOTS.

1. Although the narrator (Panchito) tells his story simply, there are things that he doesn't say directly. Instead, he gives us details and hints which allow us to "read between the lines." For example, he writes how sad he is to move to Fresno, and how excited his younger brothers and sisters are about the move. However, he doesn't write about Papá and Roberto's feelings about the move — or does he?

Look at lines 11–13, where the writer describes their ride home from the strawberry fields. Read the description of Papá and Roberto's behavior. Can you infer their feelings about the move from that description?

Now use your skill of inference to answer the following questions:

- a. Every day, Ito told his workers that they could leave by saying "Ya esora," but when he did so at the beginning of the story, his words had a different and more final meaning. How did Panchito know that he would not be hearing those words again? (lines 1–17)

- b. Had Panchito's family ever lived in Fresno before? How do you know that from the story? (lines 14–18)

- c. How many people were there in Panchito's family? What hints in the story tell you this? (lines 11–21)

- d. Did Panchito's family have a lot of possessions? Copy the words from the text that prove your answer. (lines 14–41)

- e. Do you think that Panchito's family had previously moved a lot? Why or why not? (lines 14–41)

- f. Based on Part One of the story, list at least one personality trait that Papá and Mamá shared. Explain your answer.

2. We can also use the skill of inferring to guess words from context — that is, guessing the meaning of an unfamiliar word by looking at all the clues in the text: what it could logically mean within the context of the sentence / paragraph, what part of speech it is, etc. Try to infer the meaning of the following words based on their context:

a. “When I opened the front door to the shack, I stopped.” (line 14)

The meaning of the word shack is (—).

- i. a kind of car
- ii. go home
- iii. sad and angry
- iv. a small house

Which clue(s) in the sentence helped you choose your answer? _____

b. “Since Papá did not speak English, Mamá asked the camp foreman if he needed any more workers.” (lines 43–44)

Who or what do you think the “camp foreman” is? Which clue(s) in the sentence helped you choose your answer? _____

c. “I remained motionless with my eyes glued on the hot sand, ground.” (line 64)

You are probably familiar with the word glue as a noun. What do you think it means here? _____

d. “The vines blanketed the grapes, making it difficult to see the bunches.” (lines 79–80)

Can you think of a synonym for the word blanketed? Fill in the sentence below with a suitable synonym (without using a dictionary!).

The vines _____ the grapes, making it difficult to see the bunches.

3. How can the skill of Inferring help you in your day-to-day life, such as when you’re having a conversation with someone? _____

► Making Connections

Before beginning these questions, turn to page 212 for an introduction to the HOTS.

4. Before you began reading this story, you read about the Bracero Program (page 5). Now, see if you can connect the information given about the program with some of the details given in the story in order to better understand the story.

a. In lines 69–76, the writer tells us about Papá’s alarm when he sees the school bus. Find the information from the text on page 5 to better understand this, and in your notebook, complete the connection between the two pieces of information.

i. From the text on page 5:

ii. From the story:

Papá turned pale when he saw the school bus. Instinctively, Roberto and Panchito ran and hid in the vineyards. They did not want to get into trouble for not going to school.

iii. Roberto and Panchito had to both be under the age of fourteen, but

b. In lines 51–57, the writer describes the garage that Mr. Sullivan allows his family to stay in. Find the information from the text on page 5 to better understand this, and complete the connection between the two pieces of information.

i. From the text on page 5:

ii. From the story:

The garage had no windows. The walls and roof were full of holes. The dirt floor was full of earthworms. There was no electricity or furniture in the garage.

iii. Instead of complaining, Panchito’s family _____

5. How can knowing how to make connections help you in school (for example, when studying different subjects)? List two ways.

- a. _____

- b. _____

Your Opinion

Work in pairs or in groups. Give your opinion (orally) on one or more of the issues below.

► Child Labor

1. Roberto and Panchito were children, but they worked alongside their father in the strawberry fields and vineyards, twelve hours a day seven days a week. They couldn't go to school, and certainly had no time to make friends and spend time with other children their age. This may seem very unfair to us, but we have to remember that their family was very poor, and it might have been impossible for their parents to feed everyone if Roberto and Panchito hadn't worked.

In the past, child labor was the norm, but nowadays, it is rare in most Western countries. In the United States, for example, children under the age of sixteen are only allowed to take some after-school jobs, such as working in a fast-food restaurant or in a gas station (usually up to three hours a day). However, some states have even stricter laws than that. For instance, in West Virginia, children under age sixteen may not work at any job during the school year.

- a. What would you do if you were in a situation similar to Panchito's? If your parents had a hard time making do, would you offer to get an after-school job in order to help them out? Or do you think that it's only the parents' responsibility to provide for their children?
- b. How do you feel about teenagers working (not because their parents ask them to)? List the advantages and disadvantages of having a job while you are in school in high school. Do you think that there should be a minimal age for having a job? Why or why not?

► The Necktie

2. Papá thought that the "Carcanchita" must have been owned by an important man because of the blue necktie he found behind the rear seat of the car.

- a. Why do you think that Papá equated (saw as equal) wearing a necktie with being important? Do you agree with his conclusion? Why or why not?
- b. What do you equate with being important? Are these universal status symbols, or are they your own personal associations with importance? If they are not universal status symbols, why do you see them as signs of importance?

Notice While Reading

What changes in Panchito's life?

PART TWO

It was Monday, the first week of November. The grape season was over and I could now go to school. I woke up early that morning and lay in bed, looking at the stars and savoring the thought of not going to work and of starting sixth grade for the first time that year. Since I could not sleep, I decided to get up and join Papá and Roberto at breakfast. I sat at the table across from Roberto, but I kept my face down. I did not want to look up and face him. I knew he was sad. He was not going to school today. He was not going tomorrow, or next week, or next month. He would not go until the cotton season was over and that was sometime in February. I rubbed my hands together and watched the dry, acid stained skin fall to the floor in little rolls.

When Papá and Roberto left for work, I felt relief. I walked to the top of a small grade¹ next to the shack and watched the “Carcanchita” disappear in the distance in a cloud of dust.

Two hours later, around eight o'clock, I stood by the side of the road waiting for school bus number twenty. When it arrived, I climbed in. Everyone was busy either talking or yelling. I sat in an empty seat in the back.

1. grade = hill

100 When the bus stopped in front of the school, I felt very nervous. I looked out the bus window and saw boys and girls carrying books under their arms. I put my hands in my pant pockets and walked to the principal's office. When I entered I heard a woman's voice say, "May I help you?" I was startled. I had not heard English for months. For a few seconds I remained speechless. I looked at the lady who waited for an answer. My first instinct was to answer her in Spanish, but I held back. Finally, after struggling for English words, I managed to 105 tell her that I wanted to enroll in the sixth grade. After answering many questions, I was led to the classroom.

Mr. Lema, the sixth grade teacher, greeted me and assigned me a desk. He then introduced me to the class. I was so nervous and scared at that moment when everyone's eyes were on me that I wished that I were with Papá and Roberto picking cotton. After taking roll, Mr. Lema gave the class the assignment for the first hour. "The first thing we have to do this morning is finish reading the story we began yesterday," he said 110 enthusiastically. He walked up to me, handed me an English book, and asked me to read. "We are on page 125," he said politely. When I heard this, I felt my blood rush to my head; I felt dizzy. "Would you like to read?" he asked hesitantly. I opened the book to page 125. My mouth was dry. My eyes began to water. I could not begin. "You can read later," Mr. Lema said understandingly.

For the rest of the reading period I kept getting angrier and angrier with myself. I should have read, I thought 115 to myself.

During recess I went into the restroom and opened my English book to page 125. I began to read in a low voice, pretending I was in class. There were many words I did not know. I closed the book and headed back to the classroom.

Mr. Lema was sitting at his desk correcting papers. When I entered he looked up at me and smiled. I felt 120 better. I walked up to him and asked if he could help me with the new words. "Gladly," he said.

The rest of the month I spent my lunch hours working on English with Mr. Lema, my best friend at school.

One Friday during lunch hour Mr. Lema asked me to take a walk with him to the music room. "Do you like music?" he asked me as we entered the building.

"Yes, I like corridos,"¹ I answered. He then picked up a trumpet, blew on it and handed it to me. The sound 125 gave me goose bumps. I knew that sound. I had heard it in many corridos. "How would you like to learn how to play it?" he asked. He must have read my face because before I could answer, he added, "I'll teach you how to play it during our lunch hours."

That day I could hardly wait to get home to tell Papá and Mamá the great news. As I got off the bus, my 130 little brothers and sisters ran up to meet me. They were yelling and screaming. I thought they were happy to see me, but when I opened the door to our shack, I saw that everything we owned was neatly packed in cardboard boxes.

Focusing on Literature

► Theme

Every good piece of literature has a theme — a message or general idea — and many pieces of literature have more than one theme. A theme is almost never written directly in the text, but must be inferred from a careful reading of the text and its recurring¹ symbols or ideas.

A theme is always universal — that is, it's a concept or message that applies not only to the characters and plot of any one specific piece of literature, but that can apply to hundreds of other pieces of literature with entirely different characters, plots, and settings, and that can often also apply to readers' own lives. For example, a writer can choose to focus on the theme of the cruelty of war by writing about a group of soldiers fighting together in World War II, or by writing about an elderly couple who is left homeless and penniless as a result of the civil war in Syria, or by writing about two brothers fighting against each other in the American Civil War.

A theme can be written as a concept or as a statement. For example, a thematic concept of a text could be “forgiveness,” while the thematic statement could be “Forgiveness is healing.”

1. What do you think the main theme of The Circuit is? Write it as a thematic concept. _____

► An Additional Focus on Literature

2. How does the setting change in Part Two of the story?

3. What makes Panchito a likeable character? List at least two things (based on both Parts One and Two of the story).
- a. _____

- b. _____

- c. _____

1. recurring = happening again, repeating themselves

Analysis and Interpretation I

Answer the questions about Parts One and Two of the story.

1. List three facts from lines 106–121 that show that Mr. Lema was a good teacher.
 - a. _____
 - b. _____
 - c. _____
2. Do you think that Panchito told Mamá and Papá about his great news? Why or why not? _____

3. How is Panchito’s move at the end of the story different from the move to Fresno? Write one thing.

4. Did you like the ending of the story? Why or why not? _____

Analysis and Interpretation II

Read one or more of the following questions with your teacher and answer it / them as directed by your teacher.

► Inferring

Note that this HOTS was introduced after Part One (pages 13–14). You are now spiraling (revisiting) the HOTS.

1. The answers to the following questions are not written directly in the text. Can you infer them from the text?
 - a. Most students don’t like going to school, but Panchito was very happy to do so. Why? _____

 - b. i. Why did Panchito feel relief when Papá and Roberto left for work? (lines 88–96) _____

 ii. Copy the sentences from the text that prove your answer. _____

 - c. In line 126, Panchito says, “He must have read my face.” What did Mr. Lema read in Panchito’s face? How do you know that? _____

 - d. Why were Panchito’s little brothers and sisters yelling and screaming when he arrived home from school? _____
 - e. What event do you think took place the morning after the story finishes? _____

► Making Connections

Note that this HOTS was introduced after Part One (pages 15–16). You are now spiraling (reusing) the HOTS.

2. From the story, it seems that Mr. Lema was not surprised by Panchito's sudden appearance in his classroom, even though it was two months after the beginning of the school year. Why do you think that is so? Make connections to the information you read about Mexico and the United States on page 5 and to information given in the story. _____
- _____
- _____
- _____

3. Is the ending of the story surprising? Why or why not? Answer by making connections to information stated earlier in the text. _____
- _____
- _____

► Sequencing

Before answering these questions, turn to pages 216–217 for an introduction to the HOTS.

4. Below are some of the events that happened in Part Two of the story or in the months after the story took place. Sequence them based on Part Two of the story.

- ___ a. Panchito improved his English.
- ___ b. Panchito came home from Mr. Lema's class for the last time.
- ___ c. Roberto started going to school.
- ___ d. Panchito's family packed everything they owned into cardboard boxes.
- ___ e. Panchito started going to school.

5. In The Circuit, Panchito tells us the story of several months of his life. However, he also mentions events that happened before the story took place. These events are listed below. Can you list them in the order in which they occurred? (Remember that the order in which they are mentioned in the text is not necessarily the order in which they actually occurred.) You must be able to justify your sequencing to your teacher/class. (There is one event for which you don't have enough information to be able to decide where in the sequence of events it belongs. Write NEI <Not Enough Information> next to that event.)

Important note: Santa Maria and Santa Rosa are both cities in California.

- ___ a. Mamá bought her pot.
- ___ b. Panchito's family moved from Jalisco to the United States.
- ___ c. Papá bought "Carcanchita."
- ___ d. Ito hired Papá, Roberto, and Panchito to work in his strawberry fields.
- ___ e. Panchito started learning how to read English.

6. In your notebook, make a flowchart of at least eleven events: all nine events that you sequenced in questions 4 and 5, as well as at least two additional events that happened in Part One of the story. For example:

7. How can the skill of Sequencing help you complete a project (in school or at home) more efficiently? Explain. _____

► Additional HOTS Questions

Note that the HOTS of Generating Possibilities and Explaining Patterns are shared from other units.

8. Why didn't Panchito have to pick cotton with Papa and Roberto? Generate at least two possibilities.
- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____
9. a. Use information given in the story (Parts One and Two) to identify three patterns in Panchito's life and complete the table below accordingly:

	Information given in the story	The pattern
i) One daily pattern (during the working seasons)		Panchito worked many hours a day.
ii) One seasonal pattern
iii) One multiyear pattern	Panchito hated the idea of moving to Fresno because he knew what was in store for him there.

b. Based on the table above, why do you think that the author chose the title The Circuit for this story?

Post-Reading Activity

Choose one of the following tasks and write it in your own words. (Do not copy from the story!)

1. You are Mr. Lema. Write the story told in The Circuit from your own point of view (approximately 120–140 words total).

Remember that:

- You only know the parts of the story that relate to you.
- You should include not only the facts as they are told in the story, but also your own feelings and thoughts.

2. You are Panchito. Write Mr. Lema a letter from your new place of residence (approximately 120–140 words total).

Remember that:

- A letter should begin with a date in the right-hand corner, and in the line underneath, “Dear ...” on the left side of the page.
- Panchito never had a chance to tell Mr. Lema that he was moving.

3. You are Roberto. After working alongside your brother Panchito for months, you had to continue working without him while he went to school. Although he tried not to tell you too much about school so as not to make you jealous, you could see the books and notebooks he took out of his schoolbag and worked on every night. Write a series of three diary entries (approximately 120–140 words total) describing your routine and your feelings about it. One entry should be from the beginning of September, one from the second week of November, and one from the middle of December.

Remember that:

- Each diary entry should be dated and should begin with “Dear Diary.”
- You must pay attention to where you were on each of these dates and what you were doing.
- On the one hand, you are close to your brother and have spent a lot of time with him, but on the other hand, you might be jealous of him when he attends school and you can’t.
- Panchito probably didn’t tell you the story of Mr. Lema and the music lessons.

4. You are a radio/television reporter. You have been asked to present a special report on the working conditions of Mexican farm workers in the United States. While researching the subject, you have visited different farms and interviewed both employers and workers there, including Mr. Sullivan’s farm, where you interviewed Mr. Sullivan, as well as Panchito and his family. Present your report (approximately two to three minutes of speaking) to your class, or record it as an audio or video file.

Remember that:

- The report should be objective and present all sides of the coin, not just one point of view.
- The report should give general facts rather than only focusing on Mr. Sullivan’s farm.
- You should practice before presenting to your class/recording your presentation and pay special attention to fluency, clarity, and comprehensibility.

5. Draw a map of the “circuit” that Panchito and his family traveled every year. Include at least one place not mentioned by name in the story (the place where they went to immediately after the story ends). Next to each place, write a description of the place from Panchito’s point of view (approximately 120–140 words total).

Remember that:

- The descriptions should be in your own words.
 - The descriptions should include not only what Panchito did in each place, but also his feelings about each place.
 - If you don’t know the name of a place, look at a map of California and choose the name of a place.
 - For the places not mentioned in the story, you must use your imagination as well as logic, e.g., they probably didn’t suddenly travel to the other side of the country, but rather stayed in the California area.
6. Look for information about corridos, the Mexican music that Panchito liked. Then write your own corrido (putting your own words to an existing tune) based on the events that took place in The Circuit (12–16 lines). Record the song or perform it for your class. Give your teacher a written version of the song.

Remember that:

- You must use your own words.
- Choose music that complements your words or words that complement your music.
